Tamil Nadu Flood Relief, India
Depression in the Bay of Bengal brought heavy and continuous rains devastating the state of Tamil Nadu in India. As part of the relief operations, Sewa in partnership with local nonprofit Vanavasi Kalyana Kendram distributed 1,003 relief kits, consisting of tarpaulin, plastic mats, bedsheets, clothing for two adults and two children, cooking utensils, rice and school supplies for children, to the affected forest dwellers or vanavasi families from Tiruvallur district of Tamil Nadu. For the rehab work, Sewa has partnered with local nonprofits to work on long-term sustainable projects with tangible and measurable results over a sustained period.

Earthquake Rehabilitation, Nepal
The devastating earthquake in Nepal killed more than 10,000 people, maimed tens of thousands, damaged a million homes and destroyed billions in infrastructure. Sewa committed $1 Million to the rehabilitation work. Sewa distributed 30,000 school kits to needy children and orphans in Nepal. Work is in progress at various stages for construction of 31 earthquake resistant village community centers and building seven hostels for 350 children (including 100 girls) orphaned by the earthquake.

Flood Rehabilitation in Uttarakhand, India
Continuing the rehab work in the past 2013 Uttarakhand Floods, Sewa opened three more computer centers at Agastyauni, Mayapur and Tapovan that benefitted 294 students during the year. Training on adventure sports instructorship, and lecture demonstration sessions on agriculture continued. Organic seeds were distributed for turmeric, beans and red kidney beans aimed at improving the quality of produce. Three skill development centers were inaugurated at Chandrapuri, Rayad and Tapovan. With a goal of sustained income generation, 15 knitting machines were installed at these three centers to train 110 women in producing quality winter garments.

Sanitation Project, Karnataka, India
Working towards a clean environment in line with Swach Bharat (Clean India) mission, 68 toilets serving 1,500 people ($400 per unit) were built during the year in urban slums and girl schools. Attendance increased by 87% in Anekal Rural High School (Anekal town, Rural Bengaluru district), and 51% in Laggere Urban School in Bengaluru Metro area, Karnataka state, India. Sewa plans to expand the program to other states in India and targets to construct 200 toilets in 2016.

Yuva for Sewa, Bengaluru, India
In 2015, Sewa recruited a record of 14 college-going US youth for the Yuva for Sewa (YFS) summer internship. The ten-week program included visits to several local service projects, shadowing physicians at the hospital, developing marketing strategies for youth with special needs, and, teaching underserved children. The interns not only learned about the local projects and the health care system in India, but were also inspired by the grassroots level service projects, the local people they interacted with, and, the professionals they met. “YFS was the most amazing experience, exploring a new culture, and learn about the Indian healthcare system”, said Katie Hunter, a 2015 alumna.

Sponsor a Child, India
Sponsor a Child, serves children of low-income families by providing fees, uniforms, books, bus pass, subject coaching, career guidance, and counseling. Over 3,300 children of the invisible poor (maid servants, taxi/auto drivers, construction workers, vegetable vendors etc.) across India benefitted through the Sponsor a Child program in urban, rural and tribal settings.

Family Services, USA
Running successfully for the third year, the Family Services program focuses on creating a voluntary network and structure in community so that families can be supported locally in four types of emergencies - Medical Emergency & Hospitalization, Medical Advocacy, Death & Bereavement, and, Family Crisis. The first National Conference on Family Services organized in Houston during October was attended by 40 delegates from nine cities in USA. The Emergency Services program was launched in four US cities. Educational workshops useful for families were conducted in six different cities. In Houston, monthly workshops were organized covering sessions on parenting, living will, healthy family, stress management, legal and financial guidance for families.

Stop Diabetes Movement, USA
Diabetes, a major health issue, has seen a sudden spurt over the recent years among Indians. To prevent and control diabetes, Sewa in partnership with SVYASA Yoga University, organized the “Stop Diabetes Movement” (SDM) workshop to help pre-diabetic and diabetics control or manage Type II diabetes through the practice of yoga. The 20-hour module is spread over ten consecutive days, followed by ten weekly sessions. Sewa organized ten SDM workshops across Bloomington, Chicago, Houston and San Diego chapters benefiting 215 participants.

Livelihood opportunities for women and youth, Pakistan
To enable women and youth from underprivileged minority community to be economically independent, Sewa in partnership with local nonprofit Haray Rama Foundation (HRF) started a skill development center in Pakistan for youth and women to get trained in a trade of their choice. HRF received 120 applications for car driving course, 41 applications for beautician course and 57 applications for tailoring course. HRF shortlisted the applications and trained 70 males and 2 females for the car driving course, 24 females for beauticians course and 45 females for tailoring – all of whom have either setup their own business or have found employment outside.
